

Print Networks in Africa

One-Day Colloquium

Headington Hill Hall, Oxford Brookes University
4 September 2014 9am-6pm

Conference will be covering book and print production, dissemination and consumption in Africa. It aims to contribute to a more informed understanding of national and transnational book and publishing networks and the nature of colonial and postcolonial print economies from the 19th century to the present day.

Topics Addressed

- The cultural, political and economic implications of the book trade between Europe and Africa.
- The intra-continental circulation of print, and the development of networks of printing and publishing.
- The institutions and processes of book and journal publication and dissemination, and the emergence and constitution of reading publics in Africa.

Keynote Speakers

Archie Dick (University of Pretoria)

David Johnson (Open University)

Speakers

Nourdin Bejjit (Mohammed V University-Agdal)

Ruth Bush (Bristol)

Caroline Davis (Oxford Brookes)

Sally Hughes (Oxford Brookes)

Elizabeth Le Roux (Pretoria)

Peter McDonald (Oxford)

Jane Potter (Oxford Brookes)

David Pratten (Oxford)

Ranka Primorac (Southampton)

Registration

To book one of the limited number of places, please register as soon as possible, by sending an email to Caroline Davis: cdavis@brookes.ac.uk
Fee is £15.00, which includes lunch and refreshments.

The event is funded by the British Academy as part of the International Partnership and Mobility scheme between Oxford Brookes University and the University of Pretoria, and is organised by Caroline Davis, Oxford International Centre for Publishing Studies, Oxford Brookes University.

Further information about the programme will be made available at:
www.printculturesouthafrica.org/events/

